- The section was modified to include Oracle's obligations regarding future programs and functionality.

July 25, 2003

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated May 27, 2003 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated July 25, 2003:

Extended Maintenance Support

- Oracle may offer EMS for products other than Server, therefore the EMS availability language has been changed from "Server products" to "Oracle products."

Maximizing Technical Support

- Added a "Maximizing Technical Support" section that provides suggestions which, if followed, may result in improved speed and quality of services received.

Editorial Changes

- Minor changes were made to make the Technical Support Policies more consistent with the style of the OLSA and Oracle's ordering documents (e.g., changing "Customer" to "you" and "your").

April 14, 2003

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated February 7, 2003 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated April 14, 2003:

Support Overview

- This section was expanded to clarify that services provided during the support period may not be materially reduced.

Technical Support Fees & Support Period

- These sections were modified to clarify our policies regarding the service expiration date and non-payment of support.

Reinstatement of Software Updates & Product Support

- These sections were expanded to clarify our policies should support be discontinued.

Matching Service Levels

- Removed the requirement for a customer to sign a cancellation letter when support is not renewed.

Pricing following Reduction of Licenses or Support

- This section was created to clarify our policies regarding the pricing of support should the support level or number of supported licenses be reduced at the time of renewal.

Incident Server Support Package

- This section was modified to clarify that Incident Server Support Packages do not include updates and may not be used or sold in conjunction with any other support offering, including Software Updates.

Service Name Change

- The support service name "Extended Assistance Support" has been changed to "Extended Support". This is a name change only.

Extended Support & Extended Maintenance Support

- These sections were modified to expand the programs for which Extended Support and Extended Maintenance Support are available.

February 7, 2003

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated December 13, 2002 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated February 7, 2003:

Service Name Change

- The support service name "Updates Subscription Service" has been changed to "Software Updates". This is a name change only.

December 13, 2002

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated October 23, 2002 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated December 13, 2002:

Cancellation of Support

- This section was expanded to include the cancellation policy for licenses acquired under a price hold.

October 23, 2002

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated August 07, 2002 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated October 23, 2002:

Support Period

- This section was modified to include:
 - the clause, "unless otherwise specified in the ordering document...". This change clarifies that, if an ordering document specifies a term other than 12 months, the term in the ordering document will control.
 - the statement from the former Termination section ("All technical support services ordered for a support period and the related fees are non-cancelable and non-refundable").

Reinstatement

- This section was modified to clarify that the price for support for the year following the reinstatement is the then-current list price for support less the eBusiness discount.

License Set

- This section was modified to clarify the definition of technically dependent and to exclude partner development and demonstration licenses from the license set definition.

Matching Service Levels

- This section was modified to clarify that, for purposes of determining matching service levels, desupport is considered a support level.

Cancellation of Support and/or Licenses

- This section was modified to specify that if a portion of the licenses on a single ordering document is terminated, support on the remaining licenses on that same order will be repriced to reflect the appropriate support discount for the remaining support order.

Termination

- This section was deleted and the contents were moved to the Support Period section.

Right to Desupport

- This section was expanded to include information about Desupport Notices and Extended Support services.

Technical Support Levels

- The Product Support section was modified to clarify that:
 - Customers that have maintained Updates Subscription Service do not have to migrate to current license metrics to purchase Product Support

- Oracle may make available software tools to aid in the resolution of TARs.
- The section describing the Bronze, Silver and Gold support offerings was removed.
- A section describing Extended Assistance Support and Extended Maintenance Support was added.
- The Incident Support Section was expanded to include details on the new Incident Server Support Packages offering.

Severity Levels

- The language for TAR categorization was simplified to "TARs are categorized as follows:".
 - The Severity 1 definition was changed to state that the definition of Severity 1 is not dependent on the system in which the problem exists (production, testing, development, etc.).

August 7, 2002

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated April 17, 2002 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated August 7, 2002:

Incident Support and Incident Support Server Packages

- This section has been updated to add a new support offering, Incident Support Server Packages, which provides web-based support on limited product sets.

Extended Assistance Support

- This section was added to allow Product Support customers to receive limited support for certain desupport versions of Data Server and Application programs.

Extended Maintenance Support

- This section was added to allow customers to purchase limited support for specified Data Server programs after they are desupported.

BRONZE, SILVER, and GOLD

- This section has been removed from the Technical Support Policies. Customers who wish to continue these support components should contact their local Oracle Support Sales representative (except as may be provided in an ordering document executed prior to December 16, 1999).

April 17, 2002

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated January 18, 2002 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated April 17, 2002:

BRONZE

- This section has been updated to state that Updates Subscription Services and Product Support will be offered upon renewal.

January 18, 2002

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated December 03, 2001 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated January 18, 2002:

Reinstatement of Support

- Changes were made in the reinstatement section to be clear that support for the year following reinstatement is based on the current pricing for support following reinstatement, not according to our generic support pricing practices.

December 03, 2001

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated July 21, 2001 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated December 03, 2001:

Right to Desupport

- This section was added to the Technical Support Policies to clearly communicate to our customers that we have the right to desupport our programs and that we will provide them with notice if we do.

License Set Definition

- The License Set definition was modified to make our intent more clear. We removed the phrase "and/or installed on the same system" and added examples of what we mean by "technically dependent".

Reinstatement of Support

- This section was modified to make the Reinstatement rules more clear. The actual rules were not changed.

Editorial Changes

- Minor changes were made to make the Technical Support Policies more consistent with the style of the OLSA - Terms that have been capitalized in the past, e.g. Program, Technical Support, Support Period, etc., are now lowercase and "Oracle" was removed from the current service offering names.

July 21, 2001

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated May 10, 2001 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated July 21, 2001:

Reinstatement of Support for Licenses Acquired after January 1, 2000

- This section was consolidated with the section on Reinstatement of Support for Licenses Acquired prior to January 1, 2000. There is no longer a distinction in the reinstatement rules based on when the licenses were purchased, but rather, the rules differ slightly if the license metrics are currently available on the Price List or not. The Reinstatement Rule for license metrics currently available on the Price List (or eBusiness licenses) has been changed to allow customers to reinstate Updates if they did not originally purchase them or if they lapsed for an entire License Set only. There is a new Reinstatement Fee equal to 150% of the list Updates price, or currently, 22.5% of list license prorated back to the lapse date.

Reinstatement of Support for Licenses Acquired prior to January 1, 2000

- This section was consolidated with the section on Reinstatement of Support for Licenses Acquired after January 1, 2000. See above.

License Set Definition & Matching Service Levels Policy

- The License Set definition has been expanded to include not only related (or technically dependent) programs but all licenses of a particular program that a contracting entity owns. The Matching Service Levels Policy remains basically the same, it contains an added clarification regarding which licenses in a License Set that you can choose to leave unsupported.

May 10, 2001

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated April 4, 2001 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated May 10, 2001:

Reinstatement of Support for Licenses Acquired prior to January 1, 2000

- This section was updated to clarify that Technical Support will be offered to the Customer at Oracle's then current list prices, instead of then current prices.

April 4, 2001

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated December 20, 2000 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated April 4, 2001:

Contact Information

- This section was updated with the following address for Oracle Support Services:
Oracle Support Services (OSS)
12320 Oracle Boulevard
Colorado Springs, CO 80921 U.S.A.

December 20, 2000

This section describes the changes made to the Technical Support Policies dated August 1, 2000 and reflected in the Technical Support Policies dated December 20, 2000:

Reinstatement

- The Reinstatement Fees for reinstating license acquired prior to January 1, 2000 is now based on the prorated price of Update Subscription Services only - not Updates plus Product Support.
- The Reinstatement section has been rewritten to make the 6 month waiting period for reinstating Product Support once lapsed more clear.

Unsupported Programs

- This section has been revised to reflect the fact that a customer may initially purchase the CD packs necessary to obtain the licensed programs, but may not purchase any subsequent CD packs. It had previously disallowed the purchase of any CD packs for unsupported programs.

Technical Contacts

- Technical Contacts no longer have to be an employee of the Customer, nor located at the Customer's premises.
- The net Support fees needed to receive additional Technical Contacts has been changed from $60,000 to $250,000.

Extended Assistance

- The Extended Assistance section has been removed from the Technical Support Policies, it is however still explained in the Support BP.

Updates Subscription Service

- The Transfer Rights section has been removed as we no longer have Transfer Policies.

BRONZE, SILVER and GOLD

- These sections have been updated to confirm that these offerings are no longer available and that Updates Subscription Services and Product Support will be offered upon renewal.

Support for International Licenses

- This section has been removed from the Technical Support Policies because we offer support on a global basis and these distinctions should be transparent to the customer. These distinctions were purely driven by internal revenue allocation concerns.
