Getting HR right, regardless of size

The past three years have made a lasting impact on the world of work. Every facet of work is undergoing massive change, from the workforce and employee expectations to job responsibilities and the way businesses find and retain the right talent. HR leaders and management alike are struggling to keep up with the fast-paced change while still being expected to drive business outcomes and support their employees in a world of volatility.

“ (HR and business leaders’) greatest barrier to achieving organizational outcomes is being overwhelmed by too many changes at once. ¹ ”

In the face of this new normal, business leaders recognise that success depends on their people. Low employee morale directly correlates to low productivity. HR must balance changing business demands with employees’ expectations to build a resilient workforce that drives profitability and unlocks tremendous business success.

Mid-Enterprise is hardest hit by challenges

These challenges have a more significant impact on growing mid-enterprise organisations as they are dealing with more limited budgets and are vulnerable to other pains that come with an expanding business, such as mergers and acquisitions as an example. Competing for the best employees, they need to keep up with enterprise companies, and this typically results in stitched-together HR solutions that can quickly become a messy, complex-to-manager web of applications that are too expensive to integrate and build on.

HR leaders are frustrated with disconnected HR systems

“ Ensuring that the right technologies are in place guarantees that employees remain connected. ² ”

These point solutions can quickly turn into a downward spiral of siloed data, disjointed processes, and inconsistent experiences that erode workplace quality. While smaller vendors cater to mid-enterprise needs, they don't offer unified, cost effective solutions that enable companies to quickly respond to change and scale into more considerable capabilities as they grow.

Paced Implementation

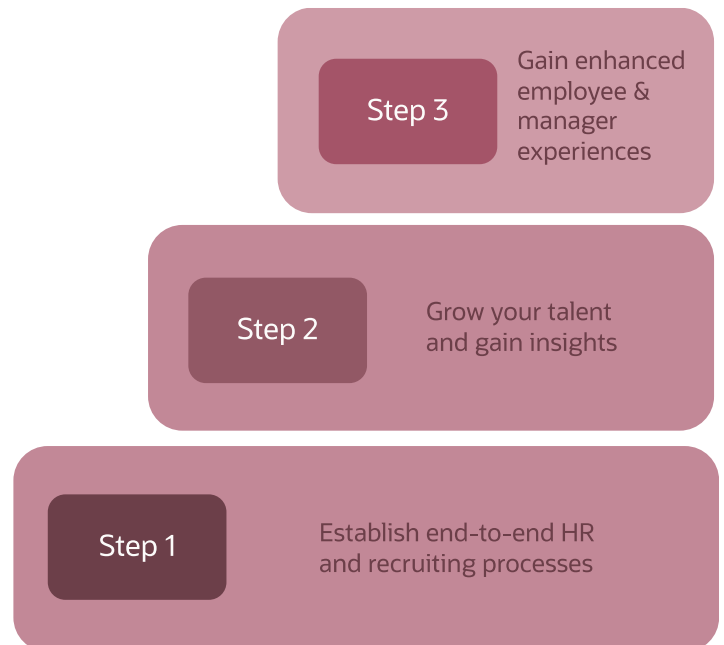

Even at the right price points, mid-enterprise companies can't afford the cost of lengthy implementation times, requiring multiple, complex integrations and a return on investment too far in the future.

Step 1 – Foundation

Create a strong HR foundation that drives elevated experiences and eliminate complex implementations by focusing on the capabilities most crucial for your business. A typical implementation begins with Core HR tools where you can activate essential onboarding and recruiting modules while offering employees a single experience to connect with other global employees and access crucial self-service features, including journeys, connection to your payroll system, and more. Get the essentials in place to establish a base for adding more advanced HR capabilities, all within the same unified HCM suite, in as little as six months.

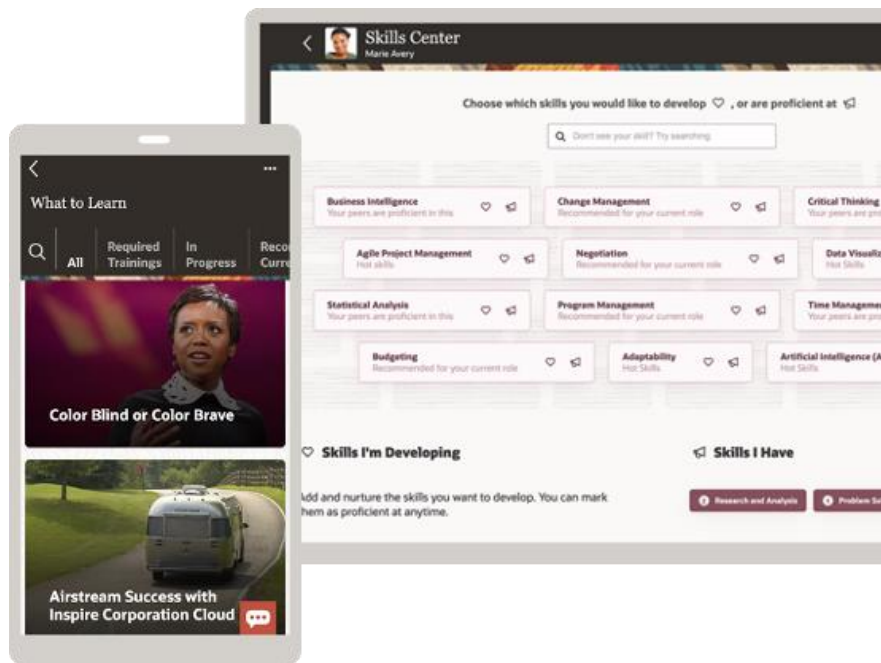

With Oracle Now, you start with the tools to

Step 2 – The Expansion

Unlock more powerful automation and performance in your next implementation phase. Now that you're ready to add the power of analytics, this is a typical time when you'll add talent management capabilities that give employees and managers control to make completing crucial tasks efficient and easy, from the commons tasks of goals, signing up for benefits or managing absences, to employees using a single experience to gain an actual path from skills to their next role with a clear career pathway both company planned and employee aspiration-lead.

With Oracle HCM Now you can wait until you are ready to take on capabilities that

- ☑ Simplify how you engage your workforce
- ☑ Provide employees with agency and growth
